Training Announcement

Leadership in the Firehouse

Full Description: .

Leadership in the Firehouse focuses on the day-to-day leadership responsibilities of company officers, chiefs, and aspiring leaders outside of emergency incidents. While operational leadership is critical on the fireground, the majority of a fire officer's influence happens in the station—through crew development, culture-building, mentorship, and accountability.

This course explores the interpersonal and organizational skills needed to lead effectively within the firehouse environment. Topics include setting expectations, managing conflict, building morale, developing future leaders, and maintaining professional standards while navigating personal dynamics within close-knit teams.

Through real-world examples, group discussion, and problem-solving exercises, participants will gain practical tools for creating a firehouse culture rooted in professionalism, trust, and continuous improvement.
