A REMINDER FOR BUSINESSES:

For employers, the current CDC recommendations do not require a negative test result from employees before allowing them to return to work, provided the employee meets ALL of the following criteria:

- At least 10 days have passed since the onset of COVID-19 symptoms (or 10 days have passed since their initial positive test date if they never experienced symptoms).
- They have been fever-free for 24 hours without the use of fever reducing medication (acetaminophen, ibuprofen, etc.).
- All other symptoms related to COVID-19 continue to improve.

Not requiring negative tests from employees before returning to work relieves employees from the undue burden of getting tested multiple times and, more importantly, allows them to get back to work sooner. In addition, in some cases, it is possible for individuals to continue to test positive for COVID-19 after completing their isolation period, even though they are no longer infectious. Additional information from CDC can be found here.
